

Small Acts of Defiance

Resistance doesn't have one form, and not everyone can take to the streets. Given the wide range of bodies, souls, and spirits in the movement, we decided to create a "short-list" of small but meaningful acts of defiance that people can do from anywhere! Everyone wants to resist executive overreach and authoritarianism, and that can take place at home, online, or within your daily life!

Here are some ideas to get you started:

File an FOIA Request

Submit a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request to learn more about government actions. This action item is eligible for a fee waiver and anyone can submit one!

Follow these links to submit an FOIA and get tips about an effective FOIA request:

- Determine the Appropriate Agency
 - Identify the federal agency that holds the records you seek. Each agency has its own FOIA office and procedures.
 - You can find a list of federal agencies and their FOIA contacts at FOIA.gov.
- Check Existing Information
 - Before submitting a request, search the agency's website or FOIA.gov to see if the information is already publicly available.
- Draft A Request
 - While there's no specific form required, your written request should include:
 - Your contact information: Full name, address, phone number, and email.
 - A clear description of the records: Be as specific as possible about the documents you want.
 - Preferred format: Indicate if you prefer electronic or paper copies.
 - Fee waiver request (if applicable): Explain if the disclosure is in the public interest and not for commercial use.
 - You can submit your request via mail, email, fax, or through the agency's online portal. Many agencies accept electronic submissions; check their specific FOIA page for details.
- Submit and Track Your Request
 - After submission, you can track the status of your request through the agency's FOIA portal or by contacting their FOIA office directly.
 - Agencies are required to respond within 20 business days, though complex requests may take longer.
- TIPS:
 - The Department of Justice (DOJ) has an online guide that covers FOIA requests and tips/information that you may find useful in submitting a request

Wear It

Whether its t-shirts, pins, buttons, or patches, send a message while going about your day-to-day. A small reminder of the current events that you can wear may get others to take action as well!

Disrupt the Narrative

Reply to misinformation with education rather than emotion. Comment on posts from elected officials or “news” sources that correct their misinformation. The MAGA-extremists love to portray dissenters as “emotionally volatile”; lets circumvent that narrative and attack from a place of education.

Note: This strategy is most effective if you do NOT interact or reply to comments that try to demine or poke-fun at your correction. They seek attention, do not give it to them. Simply correct the misinformation and move on; silence & the perception of being ignored upsets them the most.

Boycott and Divest

Refuse to spend your money with companies that are complicit in civil rights violations, genocide, climate destruction, removal of DEI policies, etc.

GAVU has a comprehensive list of ongoing boycotts as well as reasonable boycott alternatives. It is easier to boycott when you have reliable replacements to choose from!

For those who wonder if boycotting truly works:

As of May 21, 2025, Target has experience significant losses across the board due to consumer boycotts. Target reported a 2.8% decrease in 1st quarter sales, with a 5.7% of in-store sales. Target stock has declined by 27% year-to-date, reflecting investor concerns of boycotts and increasing tariffs.

Reports indicate that Target has lost over $12.4 BILLION in revenue and has seen its stock price drop by $27.27 a share!

Read & Recommend

Buy banned books, read about fascism, resistance, and civil rights history. While also educating yourself, you can later educate others in your circle. Once finished reading, you can gift the book to a fellow resister or leave it in a “Free Little Library” box for others!

Here is a quick list of books to consider:

- Understanding Power & Authoritarianism
 - “On Tyranny: Twenty Lessons from the Twentieth Century” by Timothy Snyder
 - “How Fascism Works: The Politics of Us and Them” by Jason Stanley
 - “The Shock Doctrine” by Naomi Klein
- Movements, Protest, & Civil Disobedience
 - “This Is an Uprising” by Mark Engler and Paul Engler
 - “Hope in the Dark” by Rebecca Solnit
 - “Rules for Radicals” by Saul Alinsky
- Critical Thinking & Media Literacy
 - “Amusing Ourselves to Death” by Neil Postman

Guerrilla Art

Guerrilla art is temporary, unexpected, and politically charged artwork that appears in public spaces. Guerrilla art is about disrupting the ordinary, sparking conversation, and reclaiming public spaces for expression.

Key Characteristics of Guerrilla Art are:

- Often installed secretly or anonymously
- Can be visual art, installations, or interactive
- Frequently addressed social justice, political issues, or cultural critique
- Low-budget, DIY, and grassroots-friendly

Here are a few examples of Guerrilla Art:

- Posters and Stickers – designed with activist messages or imagery, they can be easily plastered on public walls, poles, or transit stops
- Sidewalk Chalk Art – low cost chalk art that has slogans, poetry, or demands, which is a quick and easy way to get a message across anywhere in-town
- Statue Interventions – putting protest signs near or on historic monuments or statues with political significance

- Projection Art – project powerful messaging or images onto buildings at night, making a large protest sign that many can see

Guerrilla Art is accessible activism! You do not need permits, credentials, or an art gallery to display your message. It allows everyday people to use their creativity to speak truth to power.

Note: This action is not permitted and can result in fines if one chooses to resort to this type of activism.
